Mitigating Air Quality-Related Health Conditions: Prevention, Diagnosis, and Management

The District and Foundation hosted a community data walk to engage local organizations, service providers, residents, and stakeholders in discussions on the impacts of air pollution. Participants reviewed data on hospital use, economic impact, pollution sources, health disparities, and air quality-related health conditions. They shared insights, identified challenges, and explored opportunities to improve air quality and health outcomes. Key themes included prevention strategies, better diagnosis of air-related health issues, and improving access to health services. In response to the needs prioritized by local stakeholders, an RFP was developed and released. Approved applicants had projects that aimed to prevent, diagnose, and manage air quality-related health conditions for Coachella Valley residents, aiming to accomplish at least one of the following strategies:

- Increase and enhance awareness and foster connections to mitigate the impact of air quality on health conditions and outcomes.
- Evaluate household environments to identify methods for improving indoor air quality.
- Increase access to health services to reduce the impact of poor air quality on health.

A total of $997,353 was awarded, by the Desert Healthcare District, to 5 organizations across the Coachella Valley.
